YORKSHER PUDDIN':

A COLLECTION OF THE
MOST POPULAR DIALECT STORIES,

From the Pen of JOHN HARTLEY.

(THE YORKSHIRE BURNS.)

Cloth, Price 2s. 6d. By Post 4d. Extra.

"A collection of the most popular dialect stories, from the pen of John Hartley, author of 'Yorkshire Ditties,' 'Seeta's London,' &c.—Some of these racy sketches having been for many years out of print, the publishers have done well in issuing them in the present handy and, indeed, handsome form, prefaced with a portrait of the author—a handsome, intellectual face, with the lips apparently in the act of whistling or humming a favourite air. The tales and poems, some forty in number, are varied in interest, but exceedingly characteristic, pathos and merriment impartially mingling with rustic simplicity and Yorkshire cleverness. The dialect, by no means difficult to read, is certainly less unsmooth in southern eyes than the rich Dialect of Edinburgh and the Scottish Lowlands."—Bookseller, April, 1877.

GRIMES'S TRIP TO AMERICA:

Being Ten Comical Letters from Sammywell
Grimes to John Jones Smith.

BY JOHN HARTLEY. Price 1s. By Post 2d. Extra.

A Series of the most Comical Sketches ever written, cannot be read without having a laughing fit.

Grimes's adventures with a genuine Yankee (Ananias) on the voyage out and his wanderings in the various cities of the States with him, together with Ananias's wonderfully fertile resources of gaining a livelihood, make the book one of the most comical published, it is full of really good Fun.

SEETS I' LUNDUN:

A Yorshireman's Ten Day's Trip,

Or Sammywell Grimes's Adventures with his friend John Jones Smith.

BY JOHN HARTLEY. Price 1s. By Post 2d. Extra.

If ye've a fancy for a sprce; Come up to Lundun same as me,
Yo'll find ther's lots o' things to see, To pिकास yo' weel.

"It is brimful of fun from beginning to end, and would form an admirable pocket companion on a railway journey, although the greater part of it has such a racy smack about it that one feels a desire to have somebody at one's elbow to whom to read it aloud. Sammywell Grimes, a native of Bradford, tells the story of his ten days trip in the Yorkshire dialect, but in so natural and humorous a vein as to make it plain and pleasant reading to all English speaking people. This is Grimes's first Trip to "Lundun," and the sights he sees and the adventures he meets with are described in such a manner as to bring tears of merriment into the eyes of Londoner and north countryman alike. For the beauty of it is that Sam has not the smallest idea that people are laughing at himself and his native drollery. He stays in London with a friend of the name of Smith, who takes him round to see the lions; and the reader, especially if he knows the big place pretty well, feels that he is carried from spot to spot in company with the pair of them. Sights and sounds and characters familiar in their endless variety, arise about one, and London is revisited in companionship with a thoroughly jovial, good-hearted, and innocent-intended man. And mind you, as he goes along with his story you find out that Sam is far from being such a fool as he looks. Sharpers do, indeed, under very peculiar circumstances, manage to get over him a little, but all the time he shows himself to be "Yorkshire" to the backbone, and while compelled to submit to their extortion he protests against it vehemently. It is only, however, when he gets accidentally separated from Smith, who is a capital cinnere, that he falls into the hands of the Philistines. Now, when Sunday comes, you see fully what the heart of the seeming yokel is made of. It is full of reverence. And very often when evening comes, or when Sam is left alone to his meditations, he breaks out in original verse, displaying a degree of benevolence and christian charity, which would do honour to a mind, of far greater cultivation and higher pretension than that of our honest friend Sam Grimes. We advise any of our readers who love the company of a truly good, and, at the same time, most amusing fellow, to get introduced to Sam immediately."—Bendigo Advertiser.

MANY A SLIP.

(A Domestic Romance.) BY JOHN HARTLEY.

This is a work of great interest, and with the exception of one comical character, is free from dialectism. Mr. H. has evidently worked out the romance in such a skilful manner that it cannot fail to rivet the attention of the reader from the beginning to the end of the book.

"This is, we believe, Mr. Hartley's first attempt at writing a long story. It deals with life in a manufacturing town, with factories and factory girls, and a variety of characters and incidents of a more or less striking description. The interest of the story is well sustained from first to last, and we have no doubt it will be largely welcomed. The volume is neatly got up, and is creditable alike to author and publisher."—Bradford Observer.

ROBINSON'S NEW FAMILY HERBAL:

Comprising a Description of British and Foreign Plants, and their Medical Virtues; founded on the Works of the best English and American Writers on the Medical Properties of Herbs. Directions for Gathering Leaves, Flowers, Seeds, Roots, Barks; and for making Juices, Syrup, Preserves, Oils, Electuaries, Conserves, Ointments, Poultices, Pills, Decoctions, &c., to which is added, The Botanic Family Physician, with complete Directions for the use of the various Herbs. General Directions for curing or Preventing Disease. Valuable Receipts, and Remarks on Diet, Clothing, Bathing, Air, Exercise, &c., Nursing the Sick, Hints in Emergencies, Nutrition of Grain, Flesh, Animal and Vegetable Food, Fruits, &c. Definition of Terms, and other important matter.

☞ This part has already been found by the afflicted, to be more valuable than gold.

EXTRACT FROM THE PREFACE.

The government of Herbs by the sun, moon, and planets, has been exploded by modern science; and is now regarded as absurd in the extreme. Botanical knowledge has been greatly extended, and some Medical Men and Herbalists have very ably written upon it. The properties of Herbs are now better understood than in the days of Culpeper, and others.

In preparing this Work, I have rejected the Astrological government of Herbs, such as, for instance, Culpeper's laughable description of Wormwood. I have consulted the works of Hill, Woodville, Den, Thornton, and especially some of the great American Herbalists.

☞ Respecting this Work, a Gentleman writes, "I thank Mr. Robinson for publishing his very valuable Herbal, and especially for appending to it, The Botanic Family Physician, which contains lucid and appropriate Directions for the cure and prevention of disease. The Botanic-Medico System I prefer to the Allopathic, the Homoeopathic, and to all other systems whatever. I prefer it, on account of the great benefit I have received from it, and I do feel grateful for having purchased Robinson's invaluable Herbal. Why, it is only the price of one bottle of Allopathic medicine, and this ought to induce the sale of it, which, I learn, is very extensive. I deem it a rare Family Book, and it will save pounds on pounds in the ordinary Allopathic Advice and Physic."—C. M., Manchester, 1865.

NICHOLSON'S ARITHMETIC,

SIMPLIFIED AND IMPROVED BY THE ADDITION OF

SHORT RECKONINGS, MENTAL CALCULATIONS, AND A CONCISE SYSTEM OF BOOK-KEEPING.

In this work the obscure rules of other Arithmetics have been exchanged for PLAIN and SIMPLE directions which a child may understand, and the unscientific methods of working have been abandoned for those which accord with Arithmetical science. MENTAL CALCULATIONS, so very important in business, have been incorporated. OBJECT-TEACHING, or teaching by sight, (the best and most effective of all teaching) forms a prominent part in the first part of the book, and in Fractions. Also, a SYSTEM OF BOOK-KEEPING has been appended. Improvement and Progress are irresistible.
